National Intelligence Council

NIC 3457-83
12 May 1983

MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director of Central Intelligence

THROUGH : Chairman, National Intelligence Council

FROM : National Intelligence Officer for Narcotics

SUBJECT : Your Participation in our 20 May 1983 Conference Entitled: "Disrupting Heroin Supplies to the US: Does It Make a Difference?"

1. This will confirm your acceptance of an invitation to open a 20 May 1983 seminar on the implications of possible disruptions of heroin supplies to the US market. Participants will meet in Room 7E32 to hear your remarks at 9:30 a.m. If your schedule permits, please join us for coffee between 9:00 and 9:30.

2. Attending will be approximately 20 analysts and middle management officials from CIA and other Intelligence Community agencies working on narcotics, together with the following academic experts:

[redacted] clinical psychiatrist; research on narcotics. 25X1

[redacted] narcotics control [redacted] 25X1

[redacted] psychological research; paper on narcotics. 25X1

[redacted] criminologist; narcotics control policy. 25X1

[redacted] 25X1

3. The DCI plans to be present for part of a summary session between 4:30 and 5:00 p.m. Dr. Carleton Turner, Director of the White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy, will speak to the group at lunch in the EDR.

4. The following talking points are suggested:

- This conference is unique in that it is the first time Intelligence Community analysts and academic experts have met together to review and share data on narcotics control -- in this case the flow of heroin to the US.
- The unique method of study employed in drafting this paper -- combining Intelligence Community analysis with academic comment -- may in the future be generalized to such other topics as financial flows, eradication, crop substitution. 25X1
25X1
- Continued cooperation between the Intelligence Community and outside academic experts is likely to aid both parties.
- In the years ahead the Intelligence Community will be expected to do more to support government strategy for combatting narcotics and for eliminating illegal drugs close to their source.
